

AI Copywriter - Write Your Sales Page for Your High-Ticket Coaching Offer

Ok, strap in for this one... it's LONG. But only because these prompts are long.

Ironically, this actually shortens the process of writing a sales page dramatically... because most of your copywriting work is now cutting-and-pasting to ChatGPT.

FYI, I do have to include this disclaimer - I make no guarantees that your offer will sell or make you any money at all. I can only promise to give you the sales copy and formulas that have been used successfully in coaching businesses.

Whether or not you make any sales is your own responsibility.

Also - there is no magic to sales copy. It's just a structured way of presenting an offer. The KEY is really... is it a good offer?

Are we selling something that our target market actually WANTS?

A good offer can sell with mediocre copy. A bad offer will not sell, even with world-class copy.

You can put lipstick on a pig, but it's still a pig.

That being said, you should already have a pretty solid offer by the time you get here!

Now, let's dive into these prompts and write a sales page for your high-ticket coaching offer.

First, here is the process I always follow for writing sales copy:

1. Organize - gather all the info on what we're selling into one document or "brief."
2. Write to 80% - create a first draft of the sales page that is 80% good enough, following a proven copywriting formula that has worked in the past.
3. Copy Chief to 100% - go through the first draft and "punch up" the copy to get it to 100%

We're going to follow the same process here, only we're using AI to do most of the grunt-work and speed this up dramatically...

It used to take me a week to write a good sales letter, now it takes less than an hour.

LFG! 🖐️

STEP 1 - ORGANIZE.

💡 At this stage, we need to gather up a list of variables that we will use to write our sales page. Copy the variables you've developed for your coaching offer into the [RED] sections below. Then copy the ENTIRE prompt into ChatGPT to get started.

Prompt 1.1 - Get ChatGPT Organized

Today you are a world-class direct-response copywriter who specializes in selling high-ticket coaching offers to coaches and consultants. You are also a versatile marketer with superhuman pattern recognition. You can easily identify the structure of winning sales copy in any market, and adapt that structure to sell any product or service in any other market.

We are going to write a sales page for a high-ticket coaching offer using the following variables. Do not write any copy yet, and do not give me any advice. All I want you to do is read the list of variables and understand them, then await further instructions. When you're ready for the next step, say "ready."

Here is the list of variables:

Niche = [NICHE]

Target audience = [TARGET AUDIENCE]

Offer name = [OFFER NAME]

Promised result = [PROMISE]

Timeframe for result = [TIMEFRAME]

Unique method for achieving result = [METHOD]

Unique method name = [METHOD NAME]

Desires of target audience = [DESIRES]

Pain points of target audience = [PAIN POINTS]

Obstacles faced by target audience = [OBSTACLES]

Proof = [PROOF]

Story = [STORY]

Price point = [PRICE]

Payment plan (if applicable) = [PAYMENT PLAN]

Bonuses included = [BONUSES]

Here is the offer description:

[COPY YOUR OFFER DESCRIPTION HERE]

And here is what's included in the offer:

[COPY YOUR OFFER COMPONENTS/MODULES HERE]

STEP 2 - WRITE TO 80%.

💡 Now we will write a first draft of your sales page. Don't worry if this copy isn't perfect! It only needs to be 80% good enough. We will make it 100% in step 3. For now, we need a first draft in the proper formula.

This is the formula I use for selling high-ticket coaching offers:

1. Preheader + Headline + Subheadline + CTA
2. Proof Section
3. Method Section
4. Testimonials / Use Cases
5. Hero Story
6. Offer Bullets (What's Included)
7. Price Section
8. Emotional Close
9. FAQ

Follow the 9 prompts below to write each section of your sales page, one by one.

After each step, make sure to copy the output into a separate document or text file, in order!

By the end of prompt 2.9, you will have a complete first draft of your sales page.

Prompt 2.1 - Write Sales Page Heading

Now I want you to use our offer variables to write a heading section for our sales page. The purpose of this section is to directly pitch our high-ticket coaching offer and the primary transformation in a direct, attractive way that captures the attention of our target audience. To write this section, use the template and example below. Model the STRUCTURE of the template and example, but use the CONTENT of our offer variables. Try to loosely match the word count and writing style of the example. Write in the first person, using direct language, at a fifth grade reading level.

Here is the template:

PREHEADER: Brief statement of what the offer helps them achieve

HEADLINE: [GET PROMISED RESULT] in [TIMEFRAME] With [KEY DIFFERENTIATOR]

SUBHEADLINE: Using [METHOD/SYSTEM NAME] that [KEY BENEFIT] - without [MAIN OBSTACLES]

CTA BUTTON: [ACTION-ORIENTED CTA - PRICE]

Here is an example of this template in action:

PREHEADER Turn prospects into premium clients with ONE easy-to-sell offer that solves a high-stakes problem today - then build recurring revenue as they hire you to solve more problems

HEADLINE Get High-Ticket Clients in 60 Days With ONE "No-Brainer" Offer That Solves ONE High-Stakes Problem

SUBHEADLINE Using the plug-and-play Google Doc system that creates "no-brainer" offers in 4 hours or less - without complicated funnels, begging for clients, or feeling salesy

CTA BUTTON [GET YOUR FIRST 5 HIGH-TICKET CLIENTS - $297]

💡 Check the output, modify as needed, then copy it to a google doc or text file and continue.

Prompt 2.2 - Write Proof Section

Nice! Now I want you to use our offer variables to write a "proof" section for our sales page. The purpose of this section is to demonstrate undeniable proof that we have achieved the results promised by our offer. This should include the creator's results and/or results achieved by past clients/students.

To write this section, use the template and example below. Model the STRUCTURE of the template and example, but use the CONTENT of our offer variables. Try to loosely match the word count and writing style of the example. Write in the first person, using direct language, at a fifth grade reading level.

Here is the template:

Opening statement of credibility and results

Client transformation examples (2-3 specific examples with names and results)

Contrast statement - what makes this different from what others are doing

Here is an example of this template in action:

From $0 to $20K MRR by solving the problems coaches lose sleep over. 50+ coaches helped escape the "posting daily with nothing to show" trap.

[IMAGE: Screenshot of revenue dashboard showing $20K MRR milestone]

While other coaches are burning out from endless sales calls that go nowhere, my students are having natural conversations that lead to easy yeses. The difference? They stopped trying to be everything to everyone and started solving the ONE high-stakes problem their ideal clients would pay anything to fix.

Sarah escaped the freebie seeker cycle and made $25K in 8 weeks. Marcus went from "my calendar fills up but no one buys" to landing 3 executive clients at $5K each. Lisa finally stopped feeling like a pushy salesperson and now has prospects DMing her asking about her $3K workplace wellness program.

This isn't about having a bigger following or posting more content. It's about focus, clarity, and solving problems that actually matter to people with money.

💡 Check the output, modify as needed, then copy it to a google doc or text file and continue.

Prompt 2.3 - Write Method Section

Now I want you to use our offer variables to write a "method" section for our sales page. The purpose of this section is to explain how the method works in simple, step-by-step terms. Break it down into 3-4 clear steps that show the path from where they are now to where they want to be.

To write this section, use the template and example below. Model the STRUCTURE of the template and example, but use the CONTENT of our offer variables. Try to loosely match the word count and writing style of the example. Write in the first person, using direct language, at a fifth grade reading level.

Here is the template:

Header: "Here's exactly how you'll [ACHIEVE RESULT]:"

STEP 1: [Clear action] - [What they'll create/learn] - [Why it matters]

STEP 2: [Clear action] - [What they'll discover/identify] - [Competitive advantage]

STEP 3: [Clear action] - [How they'll convert] - [Ease and naturalness]

STEP 4: [Clear action] - [How they'll deliver] - [Long-term benefit]

And here is an example of the template in action:

Here's exactly how you'll get your first 5 high-ticket clients:

STEP 1: Create Your "No-Brainer" Offer in 4 Hours You'll use my plug-and-play Google Doc template to build an irresistible offer that solves ONE urgent problem your ideal clients would pay $3K-$10K to fix immediately. No more cramming everything you know into one confusing package that makes prospects run away.

STEP 2: Find The $5K+ Problem Everyone Else Misses You'll identify the specific high-stakes problem that keeps your ideal clients awake at 3am - the one they'd mortgage their house to solve. While other coaches chase "nice-to-have" improvements, you'll own the "must-have-now" market where price is irrelevant.

STEP 3: Turn Warm Connections Into Paying Clients You'll use my proven conversation scripts to reach out to people who already know and trust you. No cold DMing strangers, no MLM sales pitch vibe, no dreaded sales calls. Just natural conversations that lead to "Where do I sign?" responses.

STEP 4: Deliver Results That Create Raving Fans You'll use the simple delivery framework that gets incredible results while keeping clients asking "What other problem can we solve next?" This creates long-term relationships and MRR worth $10K-$50K per client instead of one-off transactions.

💡 Check the output, modify as needed, then copy it to a google doc or text file and continue.

Prompt 2.4 - Write Testimonials/Use Cases Section

Now I want you to use our offer variables to write a "testimonials" section for our sales page. The purpose of this section is to feature 3-4 testimonials from past clients that address specific objections and pain points our target audience is experiencing. Each testimonial should feel like it's coming from someone just like them, struggling with the exact same problems.

To write this section, use the template and example below. Model the STRUCTURE of the template and example, but use the CONTENT of our offer variables. Try to loosely match the word count and writing style of the example. Write in the first person, using direct language, at a fifth grade reading level.

Here is the template:

Header (objection/pain point in their voice): "[Common objection or pain point]"

Testimonial body: Share their specific struggle, how they discovered the offer, what changed after implementing, and the specific result they achieved.

Attribution:

- Name, their niche/title

Repeat this pattern 3-4 times for different objections.

And here is an example of the template in action:

"I'm so tired of feeling salesy all the time..."

"I was stuck in that nightmare where my calendar fills up each week with calls, but no one moves forward because of the price. I'd spend hours on 'strategy sessions' that went nowhere. Then I found this system and everything changed. Now prospects DM me asking about my stress management program for executives. Last month I made $15K just from conversations - no sales calls, no feeling pushy." - Marcus, Executive Coach

"I've been posting daily and burning out with nothing to show..."

"I was doing everything the 'gurus' said - posting daily, running free challenges, giving away all my best content. I was exhausted and attracting nothing but freebie seekers who'd ghost the moment I mentioned price. The Google Doc offer framework helped me get laser-focused. My relationship communication offer went from crickets to $25K in 8 weeks because I finally stopped trying to help everyone with everything." - Sarah, Relationship Coach

💡 Check the output, modify as needed, then copy it to a google doc or text file and continue.

Prompt 2.5 - Write Story Section

Now I want you to use our offer variables to write a "Creator's story" section for our sales page. The purpose of this section is to get our target audience to empathize with us, to see themselves in our story, and to believe they can overcome their obstacles and achieve success using the method we teach.

To write this section, use the template and example below. Model the STRUCTURE of the template and example, but use the CONTENT of our offer variables. Try to loosely match the word count and writing style of the example. Write in the first person, using direct language, at a fifth grade reading level.

Here is the template (in 5 parts):

Image of narrator

Opening: Brief introduction - "Hi, I'm [NAME], and I used to be exactly where you are right now."

Story Part 1 - The Struggle: The creator was experiencing the same pain points and obstacles the target audience faces. Paint a vivid picture of the frustration.

Story Part 2 - The Turning Point: Describe the moment or realization that changed everything. What breakthrough did they have?

Story Part 3 - The Method: How they discovered or developed their unique approach and started implementing it.

Story Part 4 - The Results: The specific, measurable outcomes they achieved. Include milestones and transformations.

Story Part 5 - The Mission: Why they're now sharing this with others and what they've learned from helping clients.

Transition to offer: Explain what it originally cost to learn this (time, money, mistakes) and contrast that with the accessible price of the current offer.

And here is an example of this template in action:

Hi, I'm [Your Name], and I used to be exactly where you are right now.

For years, I was stuck in the same expert trap you're probably in. I had all these skills and knowledge, but I was trying to help everyone with everything. My content attracted freebie seekers instead of serious buyers. I was overwhelmed, discouraged, and honestly starting to wonder if I was cut out for this coaching thing.

I had the skills to change lives, but I couldn't get anyone to raise their virtual hand.

I tried everything. Longer posts explaining all my expertise. Free training sessions. Complicated funnels. Nothing worked. I was spending months creating offers nobody wanted while watching other coaches land premium clients left and right.

The frustration was eating me alive. I knew I could help people, but I felt invisible in a red ocean of coaches all selling the same generic transformation promises.

Then came my breakthrough moment.

I realized that offer creation wasn't just important - it was THE biggest needle mover. The moment I stopped trying to include everything and focused on ONE high-stakes problem my clients were losing sleep over, everything changed.

I stripped away all the aspects of my services that didn't move the needle. I created a simple Google Doc offer focused on solving the specific problem that made my ideal clients say "I NEED this solved NOW."

The results were immediate.

Within 60 days, I had my first 5 high-ticket clients. Within 6 months, I'd gone from $0 to $20K MRR. But here's what really mattered: my clients started asking "What other problem are we going to solve next?" instead of ghosting after one session.

I'd finally cracked the code on creating offers that sell themselves.

Since then, I've helped over 50 coaches do the exact same thing. They've stopped overwhelming themselves with scattered services and started attracting premium clients who stay for months, even years.

The coaches succeeding in today's market aren't necessarily better than you - they're just clearer on the ONE problem they solve. And now I'm going to show you exactly how to find your ONE problem and package it into an offer that has your ideal clients saying "Where do I sign?"

💡 Check the output, modify as needed, then copy it to a google doc or text file and continue.

Prompt 2.6 - Write Offer Bullets Section

Now I want you to use our offer variables to write an "Offer Bullets" section for our sales page. The purpose of this section is to clearly show everything that's included in the offer, written as benefits (what it helps them do) rather than just features (what they get).

To write this section, use the template and example below. Model the STRUCTURE of the template and example, but use the CONTENT of our offer variables. Try to loosely match the word count and writing style of the example. Write in the first person, using direct language, at a fifth grade reading level.

Here is the template:

Header: "What's Included in Your [OFFER NAME]:"

✅ [Component Name] [Brief description of what it is and how it helps them achieve specific results or overcome obstacles]

Repeat for each component, module, bonus, or resource included.

Closing line: Emphasize speed, simplicity, and results.

And here is an example of the template in action:

What's Included in Your High-Ticket Client Blueprint:

✅ The 4-Hour "No-Brainer" Offer Creator Plug-and-play Google Doc templates that build irresistible $3K-$10K offers in one afternoon - no complicated sales pages or tech headaches

✅ High-Stakes Problem Identification System Step-by-step process to find the urgent problems your ideal clients will pay anything to solve (while competitors chase low-value "nice-to-haves")

✅ Warm Audience Conversion Scripts Word-for-word conversation starters that turn existing connections into high-ticket clients without feeling pushy or salesy

✅ Client Delivery Framework That Creates Raving Fans Simple system to deliver incredible results that keep clients asking "What other problem can we solve next?" - turning $3K clients into $15K+ relationships

✓ 30 Days of High-Converting Content Templates (Bonus - $297 Value) Pre-written posts and stories that attract serious buyers instead of freebie seekers

✓ WhatsApp Mastermind Community (Bonus - Priceless) Direct access to me and other coaches implementing this exact system - no more going it alone

Everything is designed for speed and simplicity. Get your first client within 30 days, not 6 months of trial and error.

💡 Check the output, modify as needed, then copy it to a google doc or text file and continue.

Prompt 2.7 - Write Price Section

Now I want you to use our offer variables to write a "Price" section for our sales page. The purpose of this section is to justify the value, address the target audience's financial situation with empathy, and present the price in a way that feels like an incredible deal.

To write this section, use the template and example below. Model the STRUCTURE of the template and example, but use the CONTENT of our offer variables. Try to loosely match the word count and writing style of the example. Write in the first person, using direct language, at a fifth grade reading level.

Here is the template:

Opening: Reference what past clients paid for 1:1 coaching

Empathy statement: Acknowledge their current financial situation

Value justification: Explain what they're actually getting (everything from the 1:1 experience)

Price reveal: Build up to the actual price, showing it's a fraction of the original

ROI statement: Show how their first client pays for the program many times over

Scarcity/Urgency (optional): Create urgency around this specific price

Payment plan (if applicable): Offer payment plan option

And here is an example of the template in action:

Here's the thing: All the coaches you just heard from - Sarah, Marcus, Lisa, David - they all paid me $5,000 to work with them 1:1 to get these exact results.

That's what my personal coaching normally costs. But I'll be honest - I don't really want to do individual coaching anymore. I'd rather help more coaches get their first 5 high-ticket clients using this proven system.

But I know most coaches are struggling financially. You're probably bootstrapping your business, maybe still working a day job, trying to figure out how to make this coaching thing actually profitable.

So here's what I've done...

I've taken everything - and I mean EVERYTHING - I teach my $5,000 coaching clients and put it into this step-by-step system. The same Google Doc templates, the same conversation scripts, the same offer creation process, the same client delivery framework.

All of it. In one place. Ready to implement today.

You'd expect to pay at least $1,000 for a system this complete and proven. But I'm not going to charge you $5,000. I'm not even going to charge you $1,000.

I'm not even going to charge you $500.

For people seeing this page, you can get everything for just $297.

That's less than what most coaches waste on Facebook ads that don't work. Your first high-ticket client at $3K pays for this entire system 10 times over and puts $2,700+ in your pocket.

But this price is only available on this page. Once you leave, you'll have to pay the full $997 like everyone else.

Payment plan available: 3 payments of $99

💡 Check the output, modify as needed, then copy it to a google doc or text file and continue.

Prompt 2.8 - Write Emotional Close

Now I want you to use our offer variables to write a "Close" section for our sales page. The purpose of this section is to create an emotional pull by helping them visualize their future success, then contrast it with the pain of staying where they are. We want them to feel the urgency of taking action NOW.

To write this section, use the template and example below. Model the STRUCTURE of the template and example, but use the CONTENT of our offer variables. Try to loosely match the word count and writing style of the example. Write in the first person, using direct language, at a fifth grade reading level.

Here is the template:

Header: "Imagine [FUTURE SUCCESS SCENARIO]..."

Future-pacing paragraph: Paint a vivid picture of their life after getting the result

"Picture your life [timeframe] from now:" section Describe specific scenarios of their transformed business and life

"What would you do with that kind of freedom?" section Get them to imagine the lifestyle implications

Reality check: Remind them that every day they wait, others are moving forward

Empowerment statement: They already have what they need, they just need the system/clarity

Final CTA: Encourage them to take action now

Sign-off

And here is an example of the template in action:

Imagine waking up to DMs from prospects asking about your specific solution...

Imagine creating content that attracts serious buyers instead of freebie seekers. Imagine being known as THE go-to person for your transformation. Imagine clients who stay for months, asking "What other problem are we going to solve next?"

Picture your life 60 days from now:

You're working with 5 premium clients who value your expertise and pay you accordingly. You're not scrambling for new business because your reputation speaks for itself. You have the freedom to choose who you work with and the confidence that comes from being crystal clear on your zone of genius.

What would you do with that kind of freedom? Would you travel more? Spend more time with family? Finally quit that soul-sucking job?

Here's what I know: Every day you stay unclear on your offer, someone else is solving your ideal client's problems and building the business you want. Your competition isn't other coaches - it's your ideal client's pain remaining unsolved.

The coaches landing premium clients aren't necessarily better than you. They're just clearer on the ONE problem they solve.

You already have everything you need. You just need to focus it on what matters most.

Your Future You will be very glad you took action today.

To your success, [Your Signature]

💡 Check the output, modify as needed, then copy it to a google doc or text file and continue.

Prompt 2.9 - Write FAQ

Now I want you to use our offer variables to write an "FAQ" section for our sales page. The purpose of this section is to counter the most common objections and concerns our target audience may have that could prevent them from investing in the offer. Each question should sound like it's coming directly from the reader's mind, and each answer should compassionately address the underlying fear or doubt.

To write this section, use the template and example below. Model the STRUCTURE of the template and example, but use the CONTENT of our offer variables. Try to loosely match the word count and writing style of the example. Write in the first person, using direct language, at a fifth grade reading level.

Here is the template:

Header: "Frequently Asked Questions"

For each FAQ: Q: [Question that reveals specific fear/objection] A: [Compassionate, direct answer that addresses the underlying concern]

Include at least 8-10 FAQs covering common objections like:

- Feeling salesy
- Burnout from current methods
- Price objections
- Niche concerns
- Lack of audience/following
- Imposter syndrome
- Fear of being seen as a "guru"
- Fear of picking the wrong focus
- And others specific to your offer

End with a final CTA button.

And here is an example of the template in action:

Frequently Asked Questions

Q: I'm so tired of feeling salesy - will this make me feel like a pushy salesperson? A:

This is the exact opposite of pushy sales tactics. You're having genuine conversations about urgent problems people desperately want solved. When someone is losing sleep over a problem and you have the solution, you're not being salesy - you're being helpful. The DM system feels natural because you're solving real problems, not pitching desperate strangers.

Q: I've been posting daily and doing everything the "gurus" say, but I'm burning out with nothing to show... A: I totally get it. The "post daily and they will come" advice is exhausting and ineffective. This system works because you stop trying to attract everyone and start attracting the RIGHT people with focused content that speaks to one specific problem. Quality over quantity always wins.

Q: My calendar fills up with calls, but no one moves forward because of the price... A: That's exactly why this system doesn't rely on sales calls. When you're solving high-stakes problems through conversations (not pitches), price objections disappear. People who are losing sleep over a problem don't haggle - they invest. The issue isn't your price; it's that you're not solving urgent enough problems.

Q: I'm in a tiny sub-niche - will these tactics work for me? A: Every successful student asked this exact question. The principles work across ALL niches because urgent problems exist everywhere. A relationship coach's high-stakes problem looks different from a business coach's, but the framework is identical. You'll see niche-specific examples in the training.

Q: What if I don't have a huge following or email list? A: Most of my students had under 500 followers when they started. This system works with warm audiences - people who already know you exist. You need conversations, not massive reach. Sarah made $25K with less than 200 Instagram followers.

Q: I feel like I need another certification before I can charge premium prices... A: This is imposter syndrome talking. You already have skills people desperately need - you just haven't packaged them correctly. More certifications won't help if you can't clearly communicate the value you already provide. Focus beats credentials every time.

Q: What if I pick the wrong problem to focus on? A: The validation process eliminates this risk completely. We test demand before you create anything. Plus, when you solve one high-stakes problem really well, clients naturally ask for help with related issues. It's never just one problem - it's the starting point for a relationship.

💡 At this point, you should have a complete first draft of your high-ticket offer sales page that is 80% good enough.

STEP 3 - COPY CHIEF TO 100%

This is where we take our rough draft and polish the copy so it all makes sense and flows well.

We don't want to change the structure, just the language.

This is also where we add our own unique personality and flavor.

Here are some guidelines:

- Read your script out loud, as if you were saying it to a friend. This is important! Reading it out loud is more effective than reading it inside your own head. It shows you exactly where you stumble or have a hard time saying it smoothly. Rewrite those parts until they sound conversational and natural. Good copy is not stiff and formal, it's casual and direct.
- Put it through the Hemingway app and follow its suggestions - www.hemingwayapp.com - this is an industry secret and one of the best free tools for training copywriters. It helps you write at a 5th grade reading level, in basic and direct language, which is most effective for sales copy.
- Generate the proper emotions within yourself first, THEN edit your copy. You should be excited to share this transformational system with people. You should feel compassionate about helping them escape their current struggles. You should feel confident about your proven method and the proof you have to show. For me, it helps to imagine 1 person I genuinely care about helping, and write for that 1 person only.
- Don't change the headlines too much - maintain the same formula that's given in these prompts. When someone reads your sales page, they will usually skim through it quickly, and the headlines are the most eye-catching parts. They need to be formulaic and structured.
- Inject your personality - Add your unique voice, metaphors you naturally use, and phrases that feel authentic to you. The template gives you structure; your personality gives it life.
- Test with real people - Show your sales page to 2-3 people in your target audience and watch their faces as they read. Where do they pause? What questions do they ask? Use that feedback to refine.

Remember: Sales copy is never "done" - it's always being optimized. But get it to 100% good enough, launch it, and improve it based on real-world feedback.
